

GENDER SENSE and THE MEDIA

Sense of gender is learned (taught) in the family setting. But we as parents, as consumers of media, are conditioned by media in our personal sense of gender and self. A new book, WOMEN & MEN, and How Media Attempt to Define Us, a College text book on gender studies by Leticia L. Steffen, deals with the conflicted sense of gender and self.

In context with religious traditions of domination, parents and religious educators need also to address other cultural distortions that condition women and men in their sense of self and gender, including the discordant role of media.
